Hints for Easter

In Torrance Shops

By Madame X

HELLO! Hello! Oh, it's you Marge! How is the world are you? Why don't you ever phone? You've been trying to get me for two or three days? Well, my dear, it's a long, long story, but here goes.

To begin with, I've been Easter shopping. No, I should say I didn't go to the city, for I found everything right here in Torrance, and if you don't believe it is all smart stuff, you just wait till I join the Easter fashion parade next Sunday. Peg went with me, and I think we covered every store in town, but I'm glad we did, for now I know how up-to-date our stores are.

First, we went looking for materials, so we could decide whether or not we'd make our own Easter frocks, and one of the first things we saw was this new rayon chiffon voile. It is simply beautiful, and the joy of it all is that it won't cling to you like georgette will, and will drape and make up just as pretty. We saw lots of prints and floral patterns, and the sight was too much for Peg, for she bought some right then and there. I came away with some watermelon pink heavy flat crepe.

MY dear, have you seen the new bags in town? We found some of the best looking ones while we were shopping. There are the new pouch bags which look rather small, but are wide at the bottom, and all fitted with compact and everything. They have plenty of room to hold all the things we weaker sex want to haul around, and yet not get them out of shape. Then there are the new modern art bags, decorated with different kinds of metal on the flap. We found an adorable tan one with a scalloped bottom—wouldn't that be darling with a tan ensemble?

HATS were next on the program, and we found so many we got dizzy trying them on. Visca straws, horsehair braid, felts, and what will you have? I got the sweetest one—all silver braid—for $3.95, and if you form an opinion about this before you see it, I'll crown you, because it is certainly good looking. You know, it's funny people don't look around more here in Torrance before they go to the city to shop, for in the city one would have had to pay $10.00 or more for that hat, and then thought it a bargain. Some people are the jinx!

WE'D heard that they were showing new spring coats in one of the stores on Sartori, so in we went. Yes, they had spring coats. And how! Light knitted sport coats, tan and gray kasha cloth ones, and dressy coats too. Although I didn't need a coat for Easter (I'm going to make an ensemble out of my flat crepe) I had to have one soon, so I chose a gray kasha for sports.

WHILE we were in there we saw a lot of the cutest dresses for tiny tots. Voiles and imported organdies in pastel shades all trimmed with lace and ribbons. I don't believe I've ever seen anything prettier or more appropriate for the tiny miss's Easter frock, and there were lace and ribbon trimmed bonnets too!

THIS ended one day of shopping, but we started out bright and early the next day to do some more. Walking down Cabrillo, we saw some modern art jewelry in the window of a store, and investigation proved it to be the very latest thing in jewelry. The necklaces were imitation brass, copper, and gold metals in futuristic designs, and combined with a semi-precious stone that forms the center of interest. What is that? No, I should say they're not expensive. If I were you I'd trot right down and look at them, for they won't last long, once people hear about them.

YOU were telling me you wanted a pair of black patent leather pumps. There's a pair in an exclusive shoe store here that I'll bet you'd think were just what the doctor ordered. They have one strap, but they're different than the usual run of shoes, and have stream lines—if you get the idea. I wanted to look longer, but Peg was in a hurry and said she wanted to buy some radio batteries before she went home. Said if she didn't get them while she was thinking about them, she'd forget and then miss out on the wonderful Easter music that will be on the air Sunday.

GETTING tired of talking? I mean are you getting tired of hearing me rave? No? Check! I'll continue. You knew that I had company coming down over the Easter week-end didn't you? Of course, they'll be here for Easter breakfast, and I couldn't serve them on that old wreck I've been using, so yesterday I had a new breakfast set sent out, and I'm simply crazy about it. While I was in the furniture store I saw a pink georgette bridge lamp that would be the makings of a bedroom. Have you seen that porch set that is in one of the furniture store windows? I wouldn't be very slow grabbing that up if I had a place for it.

THEN to get eggs dyes and candy eggs for the egg hunt Easter morning, and such a collection of fancy eggs! Chocolate eggs, candy eggs, large eggs and small eggs, and even chocolate Easter bonnets wrapped in tinfoil and sporting a purple flower in front. Needless to say, I arrived home with a good assortment of everything. As I was leaving the drug store, I found some of the most gorgeous smelling perfume. That will put the finishing touch to my Easter costume, thinks I, so now I have some new perfume!

NOW, Marge darling, you have all the dirt about where I've been the last few days, and what I've bought. I'm terribly proud of my purchases, and just think—I haven't been outside of Torrance. There's just lots of things I saw, but couldn't tell you about, but I guess you will see them the next time you are down town. Oh, for goodness sake, I smell the meat burning. Come over real soon! Goodbye!

Banquet Hall at Ferncroft Open Easter Sunday

Special Easter Dinner to Celebrate Fountain Moved to Piggly Wiggly

Extensive alterations including the installation of a banquet hall and additional booths are now under way in the Barnes' Ferncroft Cafe, 1323 Sartori avenue. The fountain has been removed entirely from the cafe and is being erected in the Piggly Wiggly store where a light lunch counter and fountain service will be conducted by Mr. Barnes. The space formerly occupied by the fountain in the cafe has been utilized for additional booths and a banquet hall, entirely separated from the cafe dining room, has been built and will be available for private parties. Mr. Barnes expects to have the improvements in the cafe completed for Easter Sunday and has arranged an elaborate menu for the day. A full course dinner will be served Sunday for seventy-five cents, with a choice of Belgian hare, turkey, fried chicken or tenderloin steak in the meat course.

Dr. A. P. Stevenson and family motored through the Mojave desert Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. N. F. Jameson and Mr. and Mrs. W. Harold Kingsley spent the weekend at Palm Springs. They report the cactus, various types of sage in bloom and the floor of the desert covered with wildflowers.
